Dear FCC,

I have been a XM radio subscriber for over a year and rejoiced in March when they added local traffic and weather. No longer do I have to shift between AM and XM for traffic, and living in the Chicagoland area, that can be important. In today's world of distractions while driving, eg. cell phones, this is one less distracting issue.

I have a right as an individual to buy and subscribe to XM. XM has a right to service its customers. I pay for it, I deserve it. Maybe that tells public radio something about their information. I do not have to be subject to commercials, I pay for my service, and it is my choice.
